Make Progress Against Ger-

Fighting Fiercest and Longest Along Canal from Bethune Eastward Beyond La Bassee.

By WILLIAM MAXWELL,

Special Cable to The Weshington Herald. A Place in France (name deleted by censor), Oct. 22.—We just go grimly on.
This is the best description I can give of the new battle which has lasted already for ten days.

When it will end is less certain than how it will end. We are making progress, but it is slow and costly, for neither the power nor the will of our adversaries has been fought over is easy to defend.

menace to his lines of communication may be disregarded and ought to be met by a forward movement which will force the enemy to abandon the threat, Flercest Fighting at Center.

success of the French soldiers must be measured by the developments on the West and north and by the desperate efforts the enemy has made, and the center, along the canal from E eastward byond La Bassee, that the fighting has been the longest and the flercest and two or three days, rain has made it difficult for the troops to move. Beyond the marshes to the north and east are rolling plains, dotted with woods which give good positions and command a wide field of fire.

To turn them out of this position is a difficult task. Artillery useless, although the guns and the howitzers on both sides have pounded away night and day, while the infantry stucks and counterattacks resulted only in heavy casualty lists.

RED CROSS BENEFIT FLANNED. HOW DEADLY BOMBS ARE DROPPED FROM AEROPLANES

This shows the method by which bombs are being dropped from aeroplanes during the European war. The bomb dropping officer is shown as just about to drop a pear-shaped bomb upon the town of liuy, in lieigium. The aviator must take the machine up to a certain height to secure the proper detonation of the bomb. If dropped when too close to the ground the charge will fail to explode. A little windmil apparatus (seen between the protecting bars at the top of the bomb) must revolve a given number of times before the bomb becomes operative. The rush of air causes a little spindle inside the outer case to descend before the bomb atrikes the ground.
